The New York City Cycling Map

The New York City Cycling Map that developed to encourage more people to bicycle by identifying a network of the bicycle friendly and safe paths for cycling, to educate cyclists about their rights and responsibilities as vehicles, and to inform cyclists about specific to make bicycle, pedestrian and bike lanes, and to encourage cycling as a legitimate mode of transportation.

The New York City Cycling Map was developed by a group staff at the New York City Department of City Planning and Department of Transportation Bicycle Program. The map is funded by the Federal Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act (ISTEA), under the Congestion Mitigation Air Quality (CMAQ) Program.
